9.3 Federal Election

SUBMITTED BY: VP External and Community Affairs "Matthew Provost"

- Federal election is happening, and it is a snap election which means a much shorter campaign than what a typical election would be.
- The election day is set for September 20,2021 but there would be advanced polling.
- VP external and Community Affairs has been working to generate communication materials to put out to members on how to vote, particularly mail-in voting.
- As a nonprofit, SFSS had to register with elections Canada to enable us share information about the election. That is essentially certifying that we are sharing information in a nonpartisan way.
- The voting demographic of 18 to 25 years is the largest voting bloc in this federal election.
- Elections Canada will not provide polling stations on university campuses which is an additional barrier to students accessing the election and being able to vote.
- There is a possibility of organizing a debate amongst the candidates.

9.4 Annual General Meeting Plan

SUBMITTED BY: VP Internal and Organizational Development "Corbett Gildersleve"

- Still sorting the actual date for the annual general meeting but it is expected to be within the last week of October to give enough time to prepare for campaigns and encourage students to attend.

FSU Common Room Space Campaign

Background

The Science Undergraduate Society and The Society of Arts and Social Sciences are among the three largest faculties at Simon Fraser University and are the two largest Faculty Student Unions within the Simon Fraser Student Society. Combined, our two societies represent thousands of SFU students and work diligently to foster an engaging and inclusive environment.

On December 9th, 2020, the 2020-2021 SFSS Council, and subsequently the Board of Directors, voted to support the Council Space Campaign. The need for this campaign arose when the Environmental Science Student Union (EVSCSU) and the Bachelor of Environment Student Union (BESU) were evicted, without notice, from their shared common room. In passing this motion, the SFSS Council and the BoD recognized the importance of common spaces for students, "as they exist as a means for students and DSUs to create a community on campus".

As part of the Council Space Campaign, student unions are encouraged to communicate with their departments the need for common room spaces on campus and enter into agreements safeguarding any current spaces administered by student unions. As Faculty Student Unions, our primary contact when finding space in the Faculty is our respective Faculty Dean's Office. Within the Faculty, the Dean's Office administers a small number of offices for staff, which are unsuitable for common room use. As we know, many DSU's struggle to acquire their own meeting space. We cannot request space from any department within the Faculty, as this may infringe upon potential DSU common room space, which leaves us in a unique situation.

Current Issues Facing Student Unions

As it stands, there is a lack of space available for most DSUs at SFU, leaving student groups without a place to hold meetings, host events, or even to just gather. In the past, DSUs have had to improvise to find spaces for themselves, which makes it incredibly difficult to garner a sense of community within each department. For example, the World Languages and Literatures Student Union has had to book library room spaces for their meetings, meaning that they were unable to establish a set meeting time throughout the semester. Additionally, this makes meeting attendance for the general WLL student body nearly impossible. Another such example is the Criminology Student Association, who although having a designated storage space in a Criminology classroom, has had to hold meetings in the hallways of Saywell Hall due to the inability to access the room during designated meeting times. While able to adapt to run operations as 'normal', this style makes connecting with students, and creating welcoming atmospheres as student union executives quite difficult.

With a return to campus this fall, many faculty and departmental student unions are worried they will face the same challenges finding spaces (to host meetings, events, etc.) as they did before the pandemic. Additionally, without consistent space, it is difficult to store items on campus. As FSU's, we host larger-scale events such as faculty-wide Frosh events, Formals, and other events which often require space for storing equipment and other items. Such events take months to plan, which require consistent use of space for multiple committees (logistics, finance, etc.), and having permanent common room space would allow for easier gathering and planning of such events. While planning for FASS Formal, many meetings of the logistics committee were held under the IMAGES theatre due to the inability to find meeting spaces.

Another issue that student unions face is the lack of engagement with their community and the membership that they represent. This issue has only worsened throughout the pandemic since online education has made it more difficult for unions to maintain a sense of community within their programs. Having designated spaces when we return to campus is one way to regain that connection. Most FSUs and DSUs had stated that they've seen a significant decline in event attendance now that they've had to adapt to hosting online events, and it is harder to build connections with the attendees. Especially with two groups of incoming students (first and second years) who have had minimal experience and socialization on campus, having space for students to interact with peers in their faculty allows them to do so.

Benefits of Common Room Space

Having common rooms for both faculty student unions has the opportunity to offer significant benefits to the student populations represented by SUS and SASS. As mentioned above, the return to campus in the fall is quickly approaching and both students who have never been to the university campus, as well as those returning to SFU, will need a space to not only spend their time between classes but also meet other individuals within the same departments and faculty as them. SFU is labelled as a "commuter school", meaning that a high proportion of students commute to school rather than living on campus, there is less opportunity for students to have interactions with their peers, especially those that would not necessarily be in the same classes as them. Having a common hub for students allows for a space to host these interdepartmental interactions that are not likely to take place in open places like the library or the few DSU common rooms that currently exist.

As faculty student unions, one of the unique characteristics that some members of our student body possess is that they may be undeclared. Therefore, they do not have membership within a DSU for them to build connections with peers. Having common spaces for FSUs will allow them to find community members and build relationships, thus promoting a more inclusive environment at SFU. This will also allow for connection between students from different departments and in different majors, allowing students to explore programs within the faculty that they might not have considered.

The chance to have students convene in a central location offers an opportunity for student unions to interact and engage more with their constituents.. Increased engagement can be achieved by students being in the common room and meeting executive members from both department or faculty unions, seeing posters/advertisements for upcoming events/meetings or even attending events/meetings held in the common room.

Considering the impact the pandemic has had on students both mentally and emotionally, the importance of common room spaces on campus is paramount. Therefore, the Science Undergraduate Society and the Society of Arts and Social Sciences would like the SFSS Council to consider the attached motion. We hope that Council recognizes the need for common room space for Faculty Student Unions, and commits to providing space in the Student Union Building for both SUS and SASS.

Signed,

The Science Undergraduate Society

The Society of Arts and Social Science

Recommended Motion

Whereas the Science Undergraduate Society and the Society of Arts and Social Sciences are the two largest Faculty Student Unions in the SFSS,

Whereas the Science Undergraduate Society and the Society of Arts and Social Sciences do not have common room space, and there is no suitable spaces administered by the Dean's Office of the respective Faculties,

Whereas if SUS or SASS were to request common room space administered by the various departments within their respective Faculties, it would reduce department space available for the Department's Student Union,

Whereas the previous Council carried a motion at its December 9th 2020 meeting affirming the vital need for student spaces on campus, and subsequently launched a Space Campaign to lobby for common room spaces on campus,

Whereas the Student Union Building is set to open on the August 23rd, 2021 and become fully operational during the Fall semester,

Whereas the Student Union Building has suitable space on the 2nd or 4th floor which could potentially be used as student union common rooms,

Be it resolved that the SFSS commit to providing separate, adequately sized, and accessible common room spaces for the Science Undergraduate Society and the Society of Arts and Social Sciences, in the Student Union Building,

Be it further resolved that the SFSS finalize the allocation of common room spaces for SUS and SASS in the Student Union Building by the first week of the Fall 2021 semester,

Be it further resolved that Council strike an FSU Common Room working group composed of the Council representatives, Presidents and other relevant Executives from SUS and SASS, and will be Chaired by the VP Administration & Internal,

Be it further resolved that the purpose of the working group be to draft separate Memorandums of Understanding between the SFSS and the respective FSU's

- e) SUS President serves as the liaison between SFSS and the Faculty of Science.

5) Statement of Understanding

The Faculty of Science recognizes the value of students having student unions to represent and advocate for their needs of the students. Furthermore, the Faculty of Science also recognizes the value to students in having allocated space to carry out their activities, build a community for themselves and to have reasonable autonomy over the use of these spaces.

The SFSS understands that space is ultimately controlled by the Associate Vice-President, Academic who has the ability to remove or add space in a Faculty at any point in time. SFSS understands that the Dean's office allocates space to departments to undertake their operations. Departments decide how to prioritize their space allocation for research, teaching, administration and student activities and are the first point of contact for any issues relative to student union group space or needs.

6) Background

For many years most student unions at SFU have been given space by the departments whose students they represent. Departments are the primary point of contact for allocation of such space to student unions groups. This arrangement has always been based on a type of verbal/handshake agreement, with the understanding that departments recognized the important role student unions play in the student experience, and ultimately in student retention. Recently, in another Faculty, a similar verbal agreement was broken and so a SFU-wide campaign was started to transition to written agreements regarding common room space. This MoU seeks to establish a formal process for the consideration and allocation of space and the negotiation of changes in space.

7) Purpose

This MoU seeks to establish a formal process for the consideration and allocation of space and the negotiation of changes in space:

The above goals will be accomplished by:

- Student unions groups will work with the Departments and Faculty of Science to provide adequate and accessible space is provided for use in meeting and securely storing supplies.
- b. Departments or Faculty of Science will ensure that space arrangements are not altered without due process and consultation with the student unions.
- c.
